After the Convention

TALK AMONG THE DELEGATES—GOOD FEELING AFTER THE CONVENTION—NO TALK OF BOLTING

[Chicago Cor. New York Tribune.]

Few of the delegates to the National Republican Convention went home until Saturday, and those who delayed their departure had a good opportunity to exchange views on the situation. There is much better feeling toward the ticket on the part of the friends of the defeated candidates, than existed at the close of the convention of 1880. The Blaine men are enthusiastic, and no ill feeling is shown on the part of any body. All acknowledge that the victory was fairly and honorably won, and that it was due solely to the fact that Mr Blaine was the choice of the people. The delegates by whom he was supported were elected by the people and under the influence of no machine, but rather with all such influences opposed to them. Many delegates commissioned to come here and aid in the nomination of Blaine worked against him. Almost the entire office-holding class was arrayed against him. Without any act or agency of his own, he was made a candidate. His nomination under such circumstances is regarded wholly as the result of an unquestionable public sentiment in his favor. There is no charge that unfair means were used to influence the Convention. Hence there is no possible ground of complaint. As Senator John I. Gilbert, of New York, said this afternoon "Every independent Republican ought to accept this nomination because it was a fair nomination. It did credit to the principle of the party, that the majority should rule, as it is regarded. I no Republican can find fault with the choice of the convention. Had the principle of district representation been applied in the South, as it was in the North, and had the federal patronage not been used, Mr Blaine would probably have had no opponent in the convention. The opposition to him was inspired almost wholly by the office-holders, and that was the result of loyalty to their commander. Had it had no other foundation it is evident from the fact that the chagrin that followed their defeat quickly vanished. They agree to-day with Mr Blaine's friends that the man popular sentiment which nominated him will elect him.

NO FEAR OF NOT SUPPORTING THE TICKET

No delegate has been heard to say that he would not support the ticket, and diligent inquiry among the delegates has failed to find a single one who would support an independent nomination. "There is no ground for such a movement," said Governor Long. "We do not question that the ticket is fairly nominated."

Young Mr Roosevelt, who feels mortified that he could not with his broom sweep back the resistless Blaine tide, said to-day "I know of no movement for an independent ticket. It is true that I have been approached from the matter, but I have not entertained it. His efficient colleague, Allerton, of the Conference Committee, says that of course he will support Blaine" and that it seems to exclude "If the Republican party is not signal triumphant next November, said Senator Plumb to-day "It will not be because the National Convention did not do its work, and all its work, honestly, fairly and well. The convention settled some important points. It eliminated one of the questionable customs of the party that was liable to abuse—that of allowing the National Committee to name the temporary chairman. This privilege may never have been abused, but it offered opportunity for mischief. It has now been abolished, along with that instrument of machine politics, the unit rule. In the nomination of Mr Blaine, the convention practically acknowledged the right of the Republican states and districts which must be depended upon to elect the ticket to name the candidates. That is a precedent that must be of great benefit. It disposes of the solid South in the Republican party. The failure to change the basis of representation gives rise to two opinions. It is admitted that a change should be made, but the minority report of the committee that considered the question was not such as to meet the views of the majority of those who favor a change. At the next convention the question can be acted upon more intelligently. In these various ways the convention gave evidence of substantial progress in party government.

About the only trace of ill feeling that remains on the surface, is that to be found between the Arthur and Edmunds leaders, consequent on their inability to agree. On Thursday night, the Arthur and Edmunds men knew that their respective causes were hopeless unless they combined. The Edmunds men would not go to Arthur, and the Arthur men submitted the name of Gresham, but Senator Hoar was foremost in opposing him. "Do what they would, the Arthur men could not win over the Edmunds men to Postmaster-General. Then the Edmunds men substituted the name of Hawley as a man upon whom a combination could be formed. But as the Edmunds men would not go to Gresham, the Arthur men would not go to Hawley, and then all hopes of a compromise ended. But even if attempted, a combination could not have prevented the nomination of Blaine. The Arthur men blamed the Edmunds men, and the Edmunds men denounced the stupidity of the Arthur leaders, but the general conclusion is that all factions will now enthusiastically support the ticket.

PLEASED WITH LOGAN'S NOMINATION

The nomination of Mr. Logan for Vice President gives general satisfaction here in Illinois, where he is so well known. There was a funny scene in the convention during the nomination for Vice President. Howard Carroll, whose principal occupation there was that of waving a flag for Arthur, went to see some delegates and inquired whether he had not better enter the race for the Vice Presidency. He said he could get the support of the South. Apparently acting on sound advice, he did not enter as an opponent of the old veteran from Illinois. Another funny scene during the ballot was enacted in the New York delegation. Mr. Roosevelt consulted with Mr. Curtis, and they agreed to nominate Andrew D. White for Vice President. They asked him if he would accept and he replied in the affirmative. Why he was not placed in nomination has not been disclosed, but as General Logan had already secured almost the solid support of the convention, it must have dawned upon somebody that any other choice was out of the question.

THE ATTITUDE OF "THE TIMES"

The attitude of the New York Times has caused considerable comment here to-day, that is rather unfavorable to that journal. A prominent Western Senator said to-day: "I am glad that paper has thus early declared itself. By its advocacy of free trade, under cover of Republicanism, it has long been doing injury to the party.

CARRY ALL THE DOUBTFUL STATES

"It was the people that dominated Blaine," said General George H. Sharpe, of New York, a personal friend of the President, to-day. "The President deserves commendation, he continued, "for his administration has been the same, but there is no use of denying that the success of the Republican party rested the nomination of Mr Blaine. We were going to elect him. No Democrat can defeat him in New York or in any other Northern Republican State. Does any one suppose that the people of this country are going to continue the government in a party that has shown no power to unite its members on the one line of policy, that after months of effort in Washington failed to combine its representatives in Congress upon the most important legislation of the year? No, there is no temptation for independent Republicans to go over to the Democracy. It is clear to every one that all that the Democrats should achieve would be office. What party ever accepted the reins of government with that as its sole object? I am glad that we have nominated a positive man like Blaine, the force of a large proportion of the Republican voters. We can have no doubt that no dire loss should be nominated and we have succeeded. It was impossible to make any combination with the Edmunds people. They wanted 278 delegates to go over to 93 people. We shall have no difficulty contest in New York, and shall sweep the State for Blaine."

CONGRATULATIONS FROM CALIFORNIA

The delegates departed from each other in the best of good humor. So it went that night and some early this morning, but most of the men this afternoon. At midnight there were few in the city. The California delegates held a meeting in the morning, which a large number of delegates were invited from prominent Republicans of that State, pledging the delegates for voting unfeedly for Mr Blaine. Ex-Governor Gorge Perkins telegraphed "We get here feel confident prospects for our success." Blaine's nomination is received with unbounded enthusiasm. A. S. Hubbard, the inventor of the call railroad, telegraphed "The delegation has earned the lasting gratitude of California for its unswerving patriotism and faithfulness." John Mansfield ex-Lieutenant Governor of the State, telegraphed "California is proud of her delegation. The work she has done."

For Adornment and Use

WHAT WOMEN WORE THIS EARLY AND THIS TOILET—BONNETS AND TRAVELLING COSTUMES

Absence of bright color, until about a decade or two ago, proved to be the great defect in modern workings of gold and silver. The cold grayness of silver oxidized with no sunniness, lowering elegance to dullness. But now the simplest objects from the use of the most opulence for other purposes is seen in glowing artistic tints colored by alloys. In the superb pieces of plate the Mervovingians and Anglo-Saxons are illustrated in the ornaments, the filigrees, and beaded work, and again in the present popular Celtic inspired work. This is seen to perfection in tea sets in plate of gold, silver pitchers, a huge punch bowl, whereon American skill and genius are working wonders in the manipulation of gold, silver and copper in original designs that regain trade to the cities of the old schools of art and research. Silver pitcher and salver is worked in arabesque, the surface covered with irregular waves, cabochon stones, set in gold, shells of different shapes the dolder, and other tints. The enchanted handle of a pitcher is of the finest burnished silver, the body, of exquisite closing and repousse, has decoration of various sorts of shells in wide waves. A unique silver loving tureen and cover is another exquisite beauty, also classed in exhibited repousse in waves in which sport fish of different species in tangled seaweed, spiny lobster crab on each side forms a handle with the extended leg, a large lobster with a glint of oxidized gold on the back forms the top of the cover.

Among many objects of art in tea sets is one of satin and burnished silver; the tea pot and kettle are without other decoration. A plate is in Damascene work of the cinquecento style, and ornamentation of design in gold upon silver, the edge of the plate decorated in gold, with branching wild flowers and grass, the centre is black oxidized, chased with the figure of a nymph in gold, playing upon a mandolin.

LAMPS

Superb reading lamps are mounted on hammered copper, a branch of foliage and apples cling to the side, fruit in bright metallic natural colors. Other gas lamps are also in hammered copper, with delicate decoration of a branch with metallic tinted leaves and a beach plate where rising from the base. A reading lamp of moon-like satin silver is surrounded with a garland of flowers in high relief carelessly applied, the globe is fine pale green cut glass. Another more antique style is of hammered copper in the shape of an elephant with a dragon forming part of the pedestal. One of the silver lamps is entwined with the golden spathes of palm flowers, and the stained glass globe above reproduces the brilliancies of the tropical skies.

"Concluding pungents," in white or tinted pale blue or rose colored cut glass, vary in length from eight to twelve inches. The pretty silver tops and standards are silver oxidized on the hammered surface with delicate silver applique; the latter pre-open on the four sides to display the bottle. Rhine pebbles flash and glitter from daggers of silver, oxidized and pure, the hilts are in the shape of crescents, crosses, the peculiar style of the sixteenth century, the sharp tines of cutlery, the Nineveh fir apple, rosette ornaments and pine cones. These are mostly set with Rhine stones, and are fastened through bonnet crowns or thrust through the coil of hair on the space of the head. Bracelets of satin and rough silver are welded in plant scales. These flexible cloth designs are a revival of a fashion of many years ago, and are far more graceful and pleasant to wear than the stiff bands. There is also a revival of dainty bangles. Bonnet pins are in form of wonderfully natural oxidized silver grasshoppers, locusts, dragon flies and little birds; spiders and owls have had their day.

FOR THE TOILET.

A Toilet appointments for men are luxurious in extreme, in the way of hand mirrors and bevelled glass framed in silver, the backs in repousse; hair and other brushes repousse; the silver handles of the shoe horns are equally elaborate. The pretty pin boxes, of ivory, decorated with [illegible] in colors have silver tops. Tobacco sets, and mostly in hammered copper, with silver decorations of appropriate and artistic elaboration. Liqueur stands in hammered copper have decoration of oxidized silver, or are carefully worked in silver in vine patterns. Nugget silver brooch, ear locks and shells, a jockey cap, and novel leaf are some of the shapes for blown stands. The delicately twisted oxidized silver vest chain and linked cable chain are the fob chain and ribbon.

[illegible] ribbon. To the fact that fabrics generally are not familiar with the foliage of vegetables may be attributed the success of something new. Shot bonnets corresponding with the shot or glace silk fabrics and are extremely small, scarcely larger than a cap, when in the guise of a little capote they are covered with the richest of fabrics, the delicate grasses, soft mutations of feathers tipped with grass, brilliant insects of the butterfly and dragonfly tribe, half hidden by the transparent gauze or beaded tulle.

The small Fanchon that looks like a half-shaven kerchief has, it turned after jaunty fashion, and is like a bed of flowers. One of the most graceful is covered all over with violets, shaded from the palest to the most intense purple and then are others blooming with the faint green yellow of asparagus or jonquils or crocuses from drifts of crocus tints.

FOR TRAVELLERS

With the return of the silvery mohairs for travelling cloaks and costumes, bonnets of the same shade are worn, either in capotes or small round hats. The rolled brim is covered with velvet laid on in lodge folds, and the usual rosette, or arrangement of bows, is placed on the left side with either an aigrette or a pair of the pins above described. Turbans are also used for travelling velvet pleated, an aigrette or pompons of feathers, wheat and humming birds, or a cluster of napoleonic peaks from a fine shaped bow of velvet—the bonnet and trimming of the same mushroom shade—are each appropriate for travelling.

In addition to mohair and alpaca poplin, checked tweed, claylot and English rough cloth are preferred for travelling costumes and cloaks. The shape depends upon the taste of the wearer and the length of the journey. For convenience the ulster Raglan with its loose shape, is recommended. The half-close "Alfred" polisse is another favorite or for lighter trip out of town a combination of the Grecian tunic and the Richmond suit is gracefully and appropriately made of the rough fusing cloth combined with velvet.

Hence are more than discernible in this country and in England to revive interest in the Bloomer costume or a dress which stimulates it—which waxed and waned thirty years ago. The efforts in this direction, however, seem to be sporadic and confined to uncertain limits. Two or three years ago the subject was prominently brought to the attention of our English cousins, and some ladies of high standing in society gave it a respectful hearing and were almost as favoring, in theory, to reform which, if the Bloomer dress had prevailed by its exemplary in practice. Such women would appear the footing to meet a similar fate to that in which they attempted, but unless there is very great change in the dress of the approaches and the bewildering it might be said to Dry must take a very long journey backward to the days of yore when "Time was young" before they can be reconciled to the donning of such a costume. The Bloomer dress, having outlived ridicule and caricature, is a sagger than that woman ought to wear the sexes in garments so nearly matching the dress worn by their fathers and brothers as possible—thus making, in fact, an interchange of cloth in the family, on occasion a matter of ease and convenience. So far as our women are concerned there has been no change in its history, when men and women were pretty much the same sort of dress, but in mechanism, and in older countries than ours the difference between their style of clothing was startling at times in keeping with the prevailing fashions and radiation of things generally. The dress of an age is a sign and test of its progress in civilization and refinement, for of its lapse or lack of it. It is hardly to be thought that any dress that seeks to turn women very far away from their present in beautiful, and tasteful, and very why satisfactory modes of dressing and adorning themselves, will be successful outside the limited circle in which the reform originates.

IT IS NO WONDER

that so many people think they neglect a disorder of the liver, constipation, Piles or disordered kidneys, but they let it go and think they will get over it. It grows worse, other and more serious complications follow and soon it is too late to save them. If such people would try Kidney Wort it would prove a quick friend. It acts upon the most important organs, purifying the blood and cleansing the system, removes the causes of those disorders and promotes health.

his conceptions and prompt in execution, a trained statesman, a skilled debater, a vigorous and polished writer and an orator of unusual power and eloquence, he captivated the imaginations of the people, satisfied their judgment and compelled their admiration and respect. More than any other he has met the popular measure of what a Presidential candidate should be, with his record, his party, his host of friends and leaders that strive to secure for him the reward of his party, until at last their labors have been crowned with well deserved success.

The extraordinary demonstration with which every reference to Mr. Blaine was greeted in the convention leaves no doubt of the enthusiasm with which his canvass will be conducted. The zeal and energy displayed by his friends both in the convention and in the preliminary canvass, will show no abatement until the day of election. From California to Maine, through how far Blaine's is a good motto and inspiring in its comprehensive vastness. It is a prescription of the entire North for Mr. Blaine, and they are determined that the title should not be merely granted in November. While we do not give up the South and are resolutely hopeful of the two Virginias, we look forward with entire confidence to seeing Mr. Blaine receive a majority of the electoral vote of the thirty-eight states of the Union from the twenty-four distinctively Northern states.

Blaine Believes in Protection

[Wilmington (Del.) News.]

Mr. Blaine is the best and most distinctive representative of the life of America in all its phases. He believes in the people, in the masses, in the great and enduring interests of American society, and the people from the humblest to the highest believe in him. His faith and feelings, even more than his intellect and capacities, crop out over the platform on which he stands this morning. He does not believe in cheap labor, because it degrades the people, and the platform reflects his sentiments. He believes in America for the Americans, and the platform reaches his faith. He believes that one man is just as good as another, whether his skin is white or black, his nationality Irish or American, and the platform emphasizes his manly judgment.

TOO MUCH WATER.

Flood in Vermont.

SPRINGFIELD, Vt, June 10 At 3 o'clock this morning the church bells pealed out another alarm to the inhabitants of the town The experience of yesterday a freshet second in fair Way to be repeated From 1 o'clock A M, the rain fell in torrents and the brook soon assumed again its dangerous proportions The scenes of yesterday were then repeated The water ran through the hotel a foot deep, depositing large quantities of mud The pathway of the water had, however, been effectually cleared by yesterday's overflow and the damage to property could hardly be duplicated

Main street as seen this morning, presents an extremely dilapidated appearance The street in some places is washed out 20 feet wide and 15 feet deep The other streets are also badly damaged Many tons of mud are deposited on the iron bridge over the falls and the structure is thought to be in danger of falling It is impossible to come in or get out of the village with a team The actual losses are now $200,000 to the business interests and $20,000 to the roads Rain is still falling

Later.

The citizens of Springfield determined to clear the brook of all obstructions, and a special town meeting to take measures for obtaining a channel of sufficient size for Valley brook and also to vote a special tax to defray the expenses of repairs, has been called for June 23d. The high water came near washing out the extensive works of the Slack Fertilizer Company at North Springfield this morning, but a gang of men succeeded in preventing serious loss. The woman reported as fatally injured by the blowing down of her barn at Cavendish bridge, is but slightly injured and will recover.

MAINE INTELLIGENCE.

Stuck on a Ledge.

HALIFAX, June 10. A large steamer, reported to be the Acadia, struck last night on Charles Ledge, off Tangier, and was towed into Ship harbor in a sinking condition to-day. She was bound from Porthamboy for Miramichi, with deals.

Railroad Track Washed Away.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10, Despatches from Rye Patch, Nevada, report that a terrific cloud burst in Humboldt range. The mountains and valleys are deluged. The Central Pacific Railroad track for a distance of thirty miles was washed out in different places.

A TERRIFIC SHOCK.

Ten Thousand Pounds of Powder Exploded.

DENVER, Col, June 10. The Grant Company's powder magazine, containing 10,000 pounds of powder, located three and a half miles east of this city, exploded with terrific force this morning. A large number of plate glass fronts in the business portion of the city were wrecked. A new farm house, 300 yards distant from the magazine, was completely demolished, but the occupants miraculously escaped injury. No clue to the cause of the explosion has been discovered

FROM WASHINGTON.

News About the Capital

Stealing Republican Seats.

WASHINGTON, June 10. The House Committee on Elections in the contested election case of Campbell vs Morey, of Seventh Ohio district to-day by a vote of 9 to 4 agreed to report in favor of unseating Morey, Republican, and seating the contestant, a Democrat.

Crop Report.

Returns of the cotton planting made to the Department of Agriculture indicate intending to an increase of area, checked somewhat in the southwest by rains and inundations, and in North Carolina and Tennessee by the low temperature in the planting season The apparent increase is about 5 per cent The season is one to two weeks late. The plants are generally thriving and vigorous The main cause of the relatively low condition is the want of rain which a few weeks of warm weather may remedy yet The continuance of bad weather now will be disastrous

Beyond the Mississippi the increase in area of spring wheat appears to be nearly nine hundred thousand acres, or nine per cent The condition of spring wheat averages 101 per cent being up to the standard in nearly every district The condition of winter wheat continues high, an average of 93 against 100 a month ago, It was 76 in June last year and 99 at the same date in 1882. The increase in the area of oats is four per cent The average condition is 99 against 96 last year and 101 in June, 1882 The general average of rye has advanced from 96 to 97 In barley the average has fallen from 101 in May to 98 It was 97 last June and 91 in June, 1882.

Swaim to be Tried by Court Martial

The report of the Court of Inquiry in the case of Judge Advocate Swaim was made public to-day It relieves the evidence regarding the loans of $6,000 by Gen Swaim to Stanley, shown to contain the letter to increase his interest in the firm of Bateman & Co, the subsequent withdrawal of Brown from the firm and the giving of a due-bill on the part of Bateman and Co for $7,000 in payment of the loan of Brown Darling and after Mr Brown's connection with the firm of Bateman & Co the Court says Gen Swaim bought and sold stocks on margins through the firm of Bateman, the usual account being kept by the firm During all his dealings with Bateman & Co Gen Swaim kept his own account with them which included all stock transactions and such other monetary dealings as he had with them

Disagreements about accounts of the failure on the part of Swaim to make and deposit collateral and on several occasions bank statements were furnished him and refused to be explained, which leads the Court to understand In November 1883, a certified statement of his accounts was furnished to Gen Swaim by the bank, showing a balance in his favor of $33,000 Gen Swaim caused a statement of the accounts with the bank to be prepared, but as these omitted some transactions they were incomplete A Mr Avery professing to be an expert accountant, was sent with one of these statements prepared by himself, to the bank to Gen Swaim to get some explanations and to compare the statement by reference to the books The bankers were shown him but all information asked for at the bank given

About February 15, 1884, Swaim assigned the due bill by indorsement to Bright, Humphreys & Co bankers, to collect and credit to him on his account with them Humphreys testified that Swaim told him to collect whatever was due on the due bill and credit him with whatever the amount might be Mr. Bell, the cashier of Bateman & Co, testified that Mr. Humphreys presented the due bill to him as a representative of the firm and demanded payment of the nominal or face value, principal and interest

Bateman & Co, refused payment and thereupon Gen Swaim directed Bright, Humphreys & Co, to bring a suit, he promising to defray expenses of the litigation, a suit was brought for $7,000 with interest and costs Swaim maintains he only brought that suit to deter him the difference of a few hundred dollars between him and Bateman & Co but that statement does not appear to have been known to Bateman till after he had preferred charges against Swaim

In addition to the charge of fraud in the matter of the due bill Bateman, in his letter of April 10th, accuses Gen Swaim of assisting in negotiating with his firm of pay vouchers which he knew to be fraudulent The facts, as shown by evidence, are that Col Morrow at that time acting as adjutant General, and now Lieutenant Colonel of the 6th Cavalry, went to Gen. Swaim's office, accompanied by Major D. B. Whitney, and stated to him he was deeply in debt and wished to borrow from Swaim about $8,000 on pay vouchers and other securities Gen. Swaim declined to lend him the money, but referred him to bankers and brokers in this city who did such business and at of Morrow's request gave him a note of introduction to Bateman & Co

The Court is of the opinion that, while it is not prepared to say that any specific fraud developed by the evidence is actually fraudulent, yet the evidence does show a series of transactions discreditable to any officer of the army, and which especially demand the severest condemnation when engaged in by an officer holding a high position and peculiar relations to the administration of justice in the army as held by General Swaim.

The Secretary of War had the report before the President to-day and it was decided to order a court martial for the trial of Gen Swaim The detail for the court will be made in a few days

BREWER NOTES Our Brewer correspondent writes Here give you a little synopsis of the general business of Brewer, thinking it may be interesting to some of the readers of the COURIER We think Brewer village is pretty a village as any on the coast of Maine The streets are shaded by elm trees sixty-one years of age, and lighted at night by street lamps It is situated on a bay at the base of the mountain, which rises to the height of 1,000 feet, and from which it takes its name There are five general stores, one dry goods and ready-made clothing, two boot and shoe stores, two millinery stores, one stove and tinware store, one drug store, one retail and one wholesale store of confectionery and tobacco one telegraph office, three blacksmith shops, two paint shops, one harness shop, one carriage shop, one shingle and stave mill, one saw mill, one carriage mill and lumber merchants, one barber shop, one shop of pants making, three doctors and one dentist, and all seem to be doing a good business There is quite a business of copper mining carried on about two miles from the village, and quite extensive granite quarries are being worked in various parts of the town. I neglected to speak of the two churches, and town clock and academy The people are sociable and hold sociables twice per week, and we also have a Masonic and Odd Fellows' Lodge, that hold regular meetings once per week. The buildings are in good order, and quite a number have improved the looks of them this spring by adding new coats of paint.—We witnessed a very pleasant event at the Baptist church last Thursday, it being the marriage of Mr. Edward E. Chase to Miss Mabel Lord, both of this place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Lord, in the presence of a crowded church. The church was handsomely decorated, and the happy couple immediately departed for Boston, and from thence to various other places to make their bridal tour. The best wishes of their multitude of friends accompany them.

THE PENOBSCOT COUNTY FARMERS' CLUB will hold its summer session at Town Hall, Orono, Friday next at 10 A. M. The question for discussion will be "Best methods of farming for profit in Penobscot County?" Pleasant dinner in the dining hall of the building No postponement on account of the weather We are informed that the people there will be glad to have a large attendance It is hoped the members will be prompt in attendance and ready to aid in making the discussion profitable and lively your two hands and waltzes sailors say, for fugh ridolon your side. Now as the fishing vessels are nearly always in a troubled sea, soup would be a very inconvenient course, and is, therefore, rarely served. Of all storms the fisherman must dread the northeaster, first, because of its fierce and sudden onset, and because this being the source of nearly two thirds of the banks—the richest and best which lie south and the—generally drift to leeward. Hence it is that when it is clear enough to see and the watch reports a vessel drifting down toward him the skipper will order his vessel around at the risk of upsetting her in the merciless sea and run before the gale under bare poles for a few strokes of the oars. Last March, if we remember rightly, the scarcity vessels out, the catches, and the gloaming of course to lee and midweather of them, with about 150 men were out. When the night watch is set, the rest of the crew usually turn in, but the master below and with all skipson, ready for any emergency, sleep around spirals of fishing trawls.
